

Eighth Commandment

Thou shalt not steal.

To take what belongs to another
is to feast on poison.

While Everything belongs to Everyone,
not everything belongs to you.

Looking outward, you see flashy trinketry and tempting affluence flaunted by those who have and have.
You lust to take it, to surround it, to own it,
to finally be happy and free.

But looking inward to the Source,
you can see that you have all anyone needs
from the Fountain of the Infinite.

Burst open then with giving,
and theft will become absurd.

Copyright © 1990 by Alan Harris. All rights reserved.
From An Everywhere Oasis at www.alharris.com